Fulfilling the Promise

Recently I prepared a paper for the Board of Trustees and the campus community on the theme “Fulfilling the Promise: NNU at One Hundred.” My task was to lay out for review my notions of what Northwest Nazarene University should aspire to be by the date of our centennial year in 2013-2014. Some would call this process and product a strategic vision.

In the paper I noted that all great adventures start with a vision—a vision of what might lie ahead, or what might be possible with determination and fortitude. And, in the case of a Christian enterprise, like here at NNU, that adventure is dependent upon the will and providence of God.

The writer of the twenty-fifth anniversary history of NNU records that there were many doubters of the early founders. An early administrator was asked often if he thought the school would ever amount to anything. He always responded, “Yes, in time, God will build a great school in Nampa.” Today, Northwest Nazarene University is a well-regarded, comprehensive university that continues to seek to fulfill that early promise of becoming a great school. I stated in the paper that “the promise of greatness lies before us as an ever-escalating challenge, never static, at once fulfilled and always yet to be fulfilled.”

In this edition of The Messenger you will read more about our strategic planning efforts pointing us toward that centennial year. Under the guidance of Dr. Mark Pitts, vice president for academic affairs, and a diverse Strategic Planning Coordinating Committee, we are seeking for the will and providence of God for the future of Northwest Nazarene University. Will you join with all of us in believing that we will have a vision big and bold enough to fulfill the promise upon which NNU was founded?

Sincerely,

Richard A. Hagood

Correction:

In the last issue of The Messenger, the Jones Suites and Lanman Prayer Garden were incorrectly identified. We apologize for the error.

The Landscape of Higher Education

As you may recall, in the past Messenger, we brought you up to date on the past decade. A summary of the past decade activities were highlighted, and we've heard many positive comments on contents of the decade in review. I'd like to express my thanks to those of you who shared this feedback.

In this issue of The Messenger, we want to bring you up to date on a look ahead. One thing is for sure as we look to the future, the landscape of higher education is changing rapidly. Think with me along these lines: In addition to our strong liberal arts and comprehensive undergraduate programs, we now have multiple online degrees. Three strands of the online Master of Arts in religion include concentrations in spiritual formation, Christian education and pastoral leadership. The education department has an online reading degree. The business department has initiated a master's in international business and an MBA online degree. Students in the Master of Arts in religion online learning programs come from all over the world such as Papua New Guinea, Guyana, Malaysia, Mozambique and Venezuela.

Stateside, four or more students are enrolled from each of the following states: Idaho, California, Kansas, Oklahoma, Oregon, Washington and Colorado. A collection of students also comes from states such as Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Maryland, Georgia, and Hawaii, with 33 states represented now and a likelihood of all 50 states being represented soon.

Our programs are growing in unique ways. As our online offerings expand and reach out to different disciplines, including the recent additions in education and business, we see more and more students impacted by Northwest Nazarene University. This fall, 125 students are expected to be enrolled in the Master of Arts in religion program with approximately 75-100 more expected to enroll in the new Masters of International Business Administration (MIBA), Master of Business Administration (MBA), and Master of Education in reading.

Not only are these online programs changing the way we meet the needs of the church, last fall 510 students were enrolled in the non-traditional degree STEP program, as well as in our social work, teacher education, religion, MBA and counseling programs. These students now comprise 32% of the total student head count at Northwest Nazarene University.

You may be asking, in these programs, is the spiritual impact the same priority as the traditional undergraduate program? One friend of the university put it this way the other day when he made the statement that we need to be able to continue to focus on the role that Christ plays in our identity as a Christian university. "Where is the Jesus?" was his question to me as we spoke of all that NNU is doing.

I believe that we can provide you many real-life illustrations to answer this question. We do not take our identity as a Christian university lightly. Specifically, two outcomes of the university focus on Christ-like character and social responsiveness. You can read about 'where is the Jesus' in several articles in this issue of The Messenger that focus on the ways that our alumni has impacted and is impacting the world for Jesus Christ. You can also read about 'where is the Jesus' when you review the articles on the "Great Hearts," soul-changing efforts of NNU students and alumni making a difference in their professions and their communities. Perhaps, though, the best illustration I heard of 'where is the Jesus' in what we do at NNU came from a student testimony at a recent MBA cohort graduation dinner. It was heart warming to hear the number of MBA students stand up and tearfully say, "What is different about an NNU education is the spiritual emphasis on Jesus."

We do want to keep Jesus as a primary focus of NNU and pledge to keep you updated in the future as we attempt to adapt to the changing landscape of higher education but at the same time stay close to our roots and the mission of pursuing an education that is centered firmly in Jesus Christ. Thank you for all you do in supporting Northwest Nazarene in this exciting venture.

"Yet when I preach the gospel, I cannot boast, for I am compelled to preach. Woe to me if I do not preach the gospel!"
– the Apostle Paul in a letter to the Corinthians

The challenge of First Century ministry is still relevant today!

As the costs of attending colleges and universities continue to rise, more and more students are finding it difficult to afford higher education. Nowhere is this need more keenly felt than in the lives of our ministerial students. Frequently, students graduate with tens of thousands of dollars in debt, and it is just as often that graduates struggle to repay that debt because of their commitment to ministry.

In response to this overwhelming need, Northwest Nazarene University is committed to establishing a Ministerial Scholarship Program to assist students and reduce their cumulative debt upon graduation.

It is our hope to raise over a million dollars to assist Nazarene students to continue the ministry of our early Christian heritage. To do this, we need your help!

Students who are eligible to participate in the Ministerial Scholarship Program have the potential of receiving up to $25,000 in aid, significantly reducing the amount of student loan debt they must incur. Exact scholarship amounts and requirements vary.

Those interested in learning more about the Ministerial Scholarship Program are encouraged to contact the NNU Office of University Advancement toll-free at (866) 467-8987.

NO BETTER PLACE

BY RANDY MAXWELL, PHOTOGRAPHY BY DAVID PERRY

If someone had told Grant Zweigle in 1996 that he would be the pastor of an urban, multicultural church in Seattle, he surely would have run for the hills instead of enrolling at the Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City. What began as a quest for a graduate degree in Christian thought and history, ended in an unexpected call by God to front-line ministry.

"Looking back now," says Grant, "I can see the Lord's hand leading me from the beginning of the journey in 1990 when I transferred from Seattle Pacific University (SPU) to Northwest Nazarene University (NNU) to where I am today. God has redeemed every part of my life for His glory and purpose. God is good, and there is no greater joy than living step by step with Him."

Grant's steps, though ordered by the Lord (Ps.37:23), seemed at times to wander with no clear destination. The Kent, Wash., native transferred to NNU seeking a change of scenery and a chance to play basketball. Giving little thought about long-term career goals, Grant pursued history and philosophy majors for the sheer joy of it. "I am fascinated by how ideas (philosophy) affect and influence people's decisions and actions (history)," he says.

After graduating from NNU in 1993, Grant accepted an invitation to serve for a year at Caribbean Nazarene Theological College in Trinidad and Tobago as a Nazarene in Volunteer Service. The young philosopher was looking to broaden his understanding of the world, and he wasn't disappointed. In what Grant described as "a life-shaping experience," his first cross-cultural experience stretched and expanded his previously small worldview and set the tone for his future ministry. "Imagine spending most weekends in a Hindu neighborhood, worshipping at a Christian church, with Sunday afternoons in the home of a Muslim family. That experience prepared me for the multicultural ministry we have today at the Beacon Hill Church of the Nazarene in Seattle," says Grant.

But Beacon Hill wasn't even a gleam in Grant's eye in those days. Returning to the States in June of 1994, Grant had no idea what to do next. The future seemed hazy, undefined. Grant enrolled in a graduate level philosophy class at the University of Washington with thoughts of teaching in higher education. Instead of finding clarity, however, Grant was increasingly frustrated at his lack of direction and began looking for things to fill the empty spaces in his life. "Unfortunately," says Grant, "I chose the wrong things."

Like Israel wandering in the wilderness because of a basic lack of trust in God, Grant had his own desert experiences as he searched for the “Promised Land.”

“The choices I made during that time were symptoms of a deeper issue. The deeper issue was a lack of trust and belief in God. Because I did not trust Jesus Christ to be my peace, hope and love, I looked for those things in other places.”

Grant’s wanderings led him back to Nampa, Idaho, in January, 1995 at the invitation of a friend who was looking for a roommate. Determined to get his life back on track, Grant began attending church again. “To be honest, I never really enjoyed church much but it seemed like the place to go to get help.” He began attending the Fairview Church of the Nazarene where Orville Halley was pastor. And it was here that Grant would find his “burning bush.”

“I will never forget the morning of April 30, 1995. It was a Sunday, and it was my birthday. That day I had planned to give a testimony in church about how my life had been changing and how good it felt to be in a church. But before I could get up and share, I felt something I had never experienced before—deep conviction of sin. God shook me to the core of my being as I realized that my feeble efforts at self-improvement were severely lacking in the eyes of a holy God. What I needed was not self-improvement but divine transformation,” he says.

Instead of standing and delivering his testimony, the broken young man headed straight for the altar where he asked God to forgive his sins and then surrendered his life to Jesus.

Grant’s world was turned upside down and suddenly new priorities filled his life. Hungry for discipleship, Grant approached Pastor Halley and asked if he would teach him what it meant to be a follower of Jesus Christ. “The Lord could not have provided me with a better teacher,” Grant remembers. “Pastor Halley poured his heart into me over the next year and a half and instilled in me a passion for Christ and the world that Christ loves.”

It was Pastor Halley who first saw ministry potential in Grant. Halley started giving Grant little assignments in the church—visit this person, share the gospel with that one, disciple another. Soon Grant was appointed lay pastor of evangelism at the church. Though still unrecognized by Grant, his steps were now on a path God had chosen from the very beginning.

Grant still hadn’t lost his desire to pursue a graduate degree in either history or philosophy, so he followed his heart to Nazarene Theological Seminary (NTS) in Kansas City, Missouri. There, he hoped to earn a Master of Arts in Christian thought and history.

Grant arrived in Kansas City in the summer of 1996. Doctor Charles Shaver was one of the first people Grant met. Doctor Shaver, professor of evangelism, had heard about Grant’s interest in evangelism and invited him to travel with him to Omaha, Nebraska, for a revival he was holding. That early encounter was the beginning of a friendship that has blessed Grant’s life in many ways.

“During my first semester at NTS, I began to feel the Lord directing me to change my focus from an academic degree to a ministry degree. I could not imagine myself as a pastor, but after a week of prayer and fasting, I submitted to the Lord and switched to a Master of Divinity with an emphasis in evangelism.”

It wasn’t long before Dr. Shaver invited Grant to serve as his faculty assistant. The next year Grant was hired as the managing director of the Chic Shaver Center for Evangelism and assistant pastor of outreach and evangelism at Kansas City First Church of the Nazarene. He served in these positions from 1997 to 1999.

It was at Kansas City First Church of the Nazarene that another flame ignited in Grant’s heart. “I met the woman who would be my wife.” Aisling Law was a student at Mid America Nazarene University with a heart for the Lord and a deep desire to minister to children whose lives had been broken by the sin of others.

Ironically, when Aisling and her twin sister were five years old, this same Dr. Shaver visited their broken home and shared the gospel with their mother, Sandy. Sandy accepted the Lord that day and their home was forever changed. Aisling and Grant fell in love and married on January 3, 1998, there at Kansas City First.

Over the course of Grant’s four years at NTS, the Lord began to lead him towards pastoral ministry. As Grant approached graduation from NTS, he and Aisling began praying about where the Lord would lead them next.

While visiting family in the Northwest in the fall of 1999, Grant made an appointment with Dr. Hugh Smith, the District Superintendent of the Washington Pacific District Church of the Nazarene. Doctor Smith told him about an urban, multicultural church in Seattle that had been without a pastor for two years. Because Aisling and Grant both wanted to work in an urban area, they were intrigued.

"We showed up at the church on Sunday and left the service with an overwhelming sense from the Lord that this is where He wanted us to be. Now the only question was whether the church would call us!"

By November, the church issued a call to the Zweigles and, after graduating Summa Cum Laude from NTS with an Master of Divinity degree, Grant began his ministry in March of 2000. "Our installation service at Beacon Hill Church of the Nazarene was the same day as the Kingdome implosion. I couldn't tell if that was a good sign or not!" Grant jokes.

The Seattle Beacon Hill Church of the Nazarene is in an urban neighborhood of Seattle, just south of downtown and the International District. The church reflects the diversity of the neighborhood, and for Grant, who was first exposed to the blessings of multiple cultures as a volunteer in Trinidad, the "shoe" definitely fits.

"If you visit our church you may worship with people from Asia, Southeast Asia, the Pacific Islands, North, South and Central America, the Caribbean, Africa and Europe who range in age from babies to senior adults. We are a multi-affluent church as well, serving poor, middle-class and affluent families."

The members of the church form a rainbow of Christian traditions as well as color. "We have folks from the three main branches of Christianity: Protestant, Catholic and Orthodox, and have frequent visits from people from other world religions."

Over the past four years the church has moved from being a mission church, where survival was the goal, to being a thriving, missional church—evangelistic, inclusive, compassionate and reproductive. As an outworking of Beacon Hill's missional focus a Spanish-speaking congregation was organized in February—the first organized Spanish language church on the WAPAC district.

"I think the genuine love for God and others that is expressed in such a diverse environment is a blessing to see and be a part of. In a world that is increasingly divided along racial, economic, gender, political and religious lines, this is a community that has found in Jesus Christ a unity and love that transcends the differences while celebrating the God-created diversity," Grant says.

*"There is no better place to be than right where the Lord has called you,
no matter where it is."*

From NNU to Trinidad, to days of wandering, the altar of surrender, and ultimately, to the Beacon Hill church, Grant Zweigle's steps have been ordered by the Lord. Together with wife Aisling and their two sons, Graiden (who will be 3 in July) and Abram (who is 5 months old), the Zweigles know that there's no greater adventure than following where God leads.

"We love it!" Grant exudes. "There is no better place to be than right where the Lord has called you, no matter where it is."

NNU Again Graduates Largest Class on Record

As word of Northwest Nazarene University's excellence has spread, more students are choosing NNU to obtain undergraduate and graduate degrees. NNU graduated its largest class on record with an expected 408 total graduates. 254 received bachelor's degrees, and 154 received master's degrees in either business administration, education, counseling, ministry, religion or social work. This trend of large classes is likely to continue, according to Eric Forseth, Ph.D., NNU's vice president for enrollment services and marketing. "As graduate program offerings in online degrees and the service professions at NNU continue to expand, we are continuing to see a positive community impact in the Treasure Valley and around the world," he said.

NNU Welcomes Best-Selling Authors

New York Times best-selling authors Herb Cohen and Catherine Crier spoke at NNU earlier this year as part of the Business Enrichment Series co-sponsored by the NNU

School of Business. Cohen, a practicing negotiator, was involved in some of the world's headline dramas, such as the Iranian hostage crisis and the skyjacking of TWA flight 847. He served as an advisor for presidents Carter and Reagan and was also involved with the negotiations for the NFL football players' strike and the General Motors Chevymobile litigation, among others.

Catherine Crier, award-winning journalist, news anchor and author of the best-seller The Case Against Lawyers, spoke as part of the NNU School of Business' Business Enrichment Series, "Avoiding Ethical Land Mines in Business."

Crier, who hosts "Catherine Crier Live" on Court TV, is also the winner of the du-Pont-Columbia, Emmy and Gracie Allen awards for journalism and has covered every aspect of law and politics during her tenure as anchor of "The Crier Report" on Fox News, correspondent on "20/20," substitute host for ABC's "World News Tonight" and "Nightline," and as evening news anchor for CNN. She was also the youngest elected state judge in Texas history.

Alumni Directory Goes Online

In response to alumni interest and feedback, the NNU Alumni Association is taking the Alumni Directory online. Users will need to establish a password to gain access, and alumni will have the ability to identify how much information they choose to make available to other alumni.

Many NNU alumni used the alumni directory site last year to update data for our print directory published last fall. A default user name is still set for any alumni who have not yet accessed the system, and at the initial login, users will be asked to choose their own preferred user name and password.

This site will allow alumni to update their own data, set privacy permissions, send alumni news, as well as look up contact information of classmates and friends. Check it out and let us know what you think at alumni-directory@nnu.edu. This is a new venture so we are interested in feedback to continue improving our service.

For first-time access: Enter your NNU ID number as printed on your Messenger address label for your user name; your password will be the first two letters of your last name followed by your ID number again in a six digit format—if your ID number is less than six digits, please put zeros at the front to make 6 digits. For example, if your ID number is 1395 and your last name is Smith, your user name would be '1395' and your password would be 'sm001395'. If you experience a log-in error using these defaults, please contact the Alumni Office at alumnidirectory@nnu.edu or call 1-800-654-2411.

Students in Free Enterprise Team (SIFE) Advance to Nationals

The Northwest Nazarene University SIFE Team matched its educational outreach projects against other SIFE Teams at the 2004 Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE) Regional Competition and Career Opportunity Fair March 31 in Seattle. A panel of judges honored NNU's SIFE team with the title of regional champion. The team advanced to the SIFE USA National Exposition, hosted by the Kansas City Business Community in May.

Students in Free Enterprise encourages students to take what they are learning in the classroom and apply it to real-life situations, using their knowledge to better their communities through educational outreach projects.

At competition, teams are judged on how well their projects taught others the principles of free enterprise.

Dr. David Houghton serves as advisor for the NNU SIFE team and was named a Sam M. Walton Free Enterprise Fellow in recognition of his leadership and support of the SIFE program at NNU.

Honorary Doctorates Confirmed

Northwest Nazarene University conferred its highest honor upon a Nampa businessman and an African Pastor Fri., March 5, during an academic convocation where both received honorary doctorates.

A.B. Ellis, NNU alumnus and former owner of Ponderosa Paint

Manufacturing, Inc., was honored for his many years of service and generosity to NNU.

Ellis is past president of the Nampa Rotary Club, received the Cecil Andrus Man of the Year Award, has been selected as a Distinguished Citizen by the Idaho Statesman and has also been the recipient of the 1987 Northwest Nazarene University Eugene Emerson Award and the 1997 Alumni Distinguished Service Award.

Also receiving an honorary doctorate was the Reverend Paulo Sueia, field director for the Church of the Nazarene in Africa. Sueia, who has pastored Nazarene churches in Mozambique has also held positions as district superintendent, professor of theology, and principal of the Nazarene Seminary in Mozambique.

Idaho Senator Larry Craig also received an honorary doctorate this year and served as the commencement speaker for the 2004 graduation ceremony. Craig is serving his third term as a United States Senator and serves on many committees including the Senate Special Committee on Aging the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, where he is the chairman of the Subcommittee on Forests and Public Land Management.

May 15, 2004 was a time of smiles and celebration and remembrance as the NNU graduating class of 2004 remembered classmate Jarod Krohn, who died last year of a brain aneurism. He was 22.

Blue ribbons filled Nampa's Idaho Center as each person remembered the light that Jarod was to the campus during his time at NNU. 2004 Senior class president Melissa Pinkerton said that Jarod's family, friends and classmates were all involved in the decision to make and wear the ribbons. "Our thoughts and prayers are continually with the Krohn family," Melissa said.

Jarod, who is remembered for his great love of the outdoors, was a sports recreation management major at NNU and loved the beauty of Idaho. Jarod is survived by his parents, Bobbi and Rob, brother Jason, and fianc e Kerri Tygard.

During investiture, the senior class presented Jarod's parents with a tree to be planted in his honor outside the new Harmon and Elizabeth Johnson Sports Center and $1000 toward the Jarod Krohn Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Those who are interested in helping with the fund are encouraged to contact Dr. Darrell Marks or Tony Vidmar in the Office of University Advancement. at 208-467-8425 or toll-free, 866-467-8987.

Sitting down and talking with Mark Maddix is like sitting down with a dear friend.

When I talk to Mark, his manners are impeccable; his smile genuine; his heart sincere. Simply put, he is down-home good.

He tells me that he grew up in Olive Hill, Ky., and he retains his small town heritage in his obvious sincerity and gentle spirit. So how does someone who loves Kentucky so much end up at NNU, I wonder.

"I knew that this is where I would come. I sensed that this was where we fit," he tells me, reflecting on the call he received two years ago to lead the online master's programs in religion at NNU. Since his coming, online programs at NNU have grown to include three emphases within the Master of Arts in religion degree: pastoral theology, Christian education, and spiritual formation.

Maddix says that there are many things he enjoys about teaching, but that more than anything, he savors the chance he has to influence others. "The most important part for me is the opportunity I have to invest in other people's lives and to be in the process of helping shape and form church leaders for today and for the future," he says.

Of the online learning experience, Maddix has nothing but positive things to say. Working with groups of 15 – 20 students online, the small-group feel appeals to Maddix, who also appreciates the fact that online learning allows ministers and those interested in ministry to immediately apply what they are learning in their churches. "Learning is actualized," says Maddix. "The best part of online (learning) is that it provides people a chance to obtain graduate education while remaining in ministry."

Officially Maddix is a professor of Christian education within the NNU School of Theology and Christian Ministries. A graduate of Asbury College, Asbury Theological Seminary and Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Maddix holds degrees in bible and Christian education, divinity and Christian educational studies. He is the author or co-author of numerous articles, books and textbooks and travels the world teaching and speaking.

Among his other appointments and commitments, he and his family spent several weeks this summer in Brisbane, Australia, where he taught at Nazarene Theological College. Maddix and his wife, Sherri, have two children, Adrienne and Nathaniel and currently make their home in Nampa.

The School of Theology & Christian Ministries at NNU now offers three fully online graduate degree programs: Christian education - children and youth; spiritual formation; and pastoral ministry.

Depending on the program, new learning communities begin at various times throughout the year. There are no residential components for any of the three programs, all of which are accredited by the Northwest Commission on Colleges & Universities.

Seventy-five students from five world areas are presently enrolled in the program. Courses are taught online by NNU faculty and specialized adjunct professors, enabling students to complete a master's degree in religion while remaining in their ministry assignments as pastors, missionaries and staff members.

For more information about NNU's online graduate programs in religion, check out the university's new website at www.nnu.edu/mar. Additional questions can be directed to Kathy Bynum, program manager for graduate theological online education, by e-mailing mar@nnu.edu or calling 208-467-8432.

MATT CHITWOOD lives intentionally

Matt Chitwood will tell you that he was always a “good church kid,” but after international travel and four years at NNU, it is evident in talking to Matt that somewhere in between his high school and college graduations a shift occurred.

Maybe it was on one of his mission trips, cleaning a church in Barcelona. Maybe it was during the semester he spent in Costa Rica studying with the Council for Christian Colleges and University’s study abroad program. Or maybe it was while he was just hanging out with friends in chapel or NNU’s coffee house, Amity Perk. Maybe it was the combination of those experiences that led Matt to his belief that life must be lived with a focus on others.

“You have to live intentionally to really make a difference and to really live the way our Christian faith calls us to do,” Matt said. “There are needs to be met, and it’s important to make it real.”

Matt said that his travels while in college really opened his eyes to the “big world that is out there.”

“My faith became more than youth-group focus on others and interaction with them,” he said. Being faced with issues of poverty and homelessness “grind it down to what’s important,” he said, recalling a time he stood above a garbage dump in Guatemala watching the thousands who live and work there. “You stand there and it just breaks your heart,” Matt said. “It’s hard to realize that a world like that exists.”

Exist, however, it does, and Matt found himself questioning his life in an entirely different way after his international experiences. “Why do I deserve this?” he asked. “You see the blatant contrast between our society and the consumerism and the people who have nothing. I wonder where Jesus would be if he were here today. I don’t think he’d be cruising around and living the American dream. It puts a new perspective on what the Bible asks me to do.”

Through his travels and his own personal spiritual journey, he said he realized time and again living to meet the needs of others must be intentional.

“The Bible calls us to loving and helping the poor

– the widows and the orphans and the needy. You always hear ‘Love your neighbor as yourself,’ but it’s not about religion; it’s about relationship,” Matt said.

Matt calls his experience with the CCCU study abroad program “amazing” and added that “the main thing about it wasn’t studying, it was about challenging my faith.”

On May 15, Matt graduated as part of NNU’s largest graduating class to date, earning his degree in business with a focus on international relations and a personal bent toward continuing mission work. Already Matt has impacted the world for Christ through his travels. To find out more about the CCCU study abroad programs, visit their Web site online at www.cccu.org.

ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR –Robert Donaldson

“I’ve never been afraid to try; I’ve never been afraid to fail. I’ve never planned to fail, but if I do, at least I know I’ve tried.” These are the words of Robert Donaldson, more familiarly known as “Dip.”

Born in England and raised in Sacramento, Robert came to NNU as a junior college transfer basketball recruit in 1979 and was named 1981 Player of the Year by his teammates. While at NNU, he met his wife, Beth Bolarjack. They were married in 1983 and have six children.

After playing for NNU, Robert’s dual citizenship allowed him opportunity to play on England’s National Team. In 1988, Robert accepted the post of assistant coach of England’s National Junior Team, stepping up a year later as assistant coach to the England Men’s Senior Team.

Twelve years ago Robert and his family settled in Coventry, England, where he took over the franchise of Coventry’s ailing basketball club. The Coventry Crusaders are now one of the most successful clubs in England. In November 2002 Dip was nominated Director of National Teams for the English Basketball Association.

Throughout his career, Robert never lost sight of a commitment he made at NNU to use basketball as a tool for reaching young people. In 1997 he established The Crusader Foundation, a charitable organization geared toward supporting area youth.

Recognized throughout Coventry and Warwickshire as the Christian sportsman who is not afraid to wear his heart on his sleeve, Robert was invited to join the executive board of Coventry’s Youth for Christ organization seven years ago, and continues his ministry both on and off the court.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE –Bob Kiel

Colonel Robert C. Kiel knew from childhood that he would attend college at Northwest Nazarene University. It was his mother’s life-long dream and the influence of an uncle that made it happen.

In the fall of 1944 Bob enrolled as a student and spent his days on campus pursuing his love of basketball as well as his studies. These days Bob still finds himself on campus often, as an encouragement to several departments by lightening their workload through his volunteer efforts and continuing to pursue his love of basketball.

After graduating in 1949 with a BA in history and a minor in education, Bob taught high school in Marsing for two years before entering into a military career with the US Air Force, where he served on continuous active duty until his retirement in 1980. Bob received two Air Force commendation medals – one for Meritorious Achievement; three Meritorious Service medals; one Legion of Merit; and he was named 1979 Air Logistics Command’s Outstanding Consolidated Base Office Senior Personnel Manager.

In 1981 Bob and his wife, Won, moved to Boise and Bob began to find ways to be involved in helping his alma mater. Having been an athlete in college, the athletic department was a natural fit. Bob has been on the Crusader Athletic Association (CAA) Executive Board for ten years, and presently serves as CAA Secretary. He also served seven years on the committee that managed the NAIA National Men’s Basketball Tournament hosted by NNU and edited the CAA Newsletter for nine years.

Along with his other volunteer activities, Bob also serves as class agent to the class of 1949.

YOUNG ALUMNUS OF THE YEAR

—Julie van Beek

Julie van Beek, class of 1989, grew up in Nampa and presently serves as head coach of the women's basketball program at Trevecca Nazarene University, where she has been since TNU restarted the women's team, in 1996. The team was 4-24 its first season, but by the fourth year, the team qualified for the national tournament and have been there twice since. Julie's overall record is 140-109.

Julie says she came to NNU because she wanted to attend and play basketball for a Christian college and was impressed by the caring coaches and faculty, especially head women's basketball coach Jerry Finkbeiner, for whom she would later serve as assistant coach at Southern Nazarene University from 1992-96.

During her years as assistant coach at SNU, Julie helped lead the school to three NAIA National Championships and a 134-9 record. Julie reflects on her years at NNU with fondness and says that her NNU experience and the influence of coaches and teachers are among the reasons she is at Trevecca today. In the NNU record book, Julie is listed in the individual top ten season or career records in ten different categories. Among her other awards, in 1989 Julie received the Salisbury Basketball Award and in 1991 was inducted into the Cascade Conference Hall of Fame.

Julie teaches a Sunday School class and serves on the Christian Ministries Committee at her church. She is also involved with the Nashville Fellowship League, an outreach ministry to the Tennessee Titans and their fans. Professionally, she serves as first vice president to the NAIA Women's Basketball Coaches Association, is an NAIA National Rater, and is a member of the NAIA All-American Selection Committee.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE

—Bruce Webb

Born in Oklahoma and raised in Northern California, Bruce Webb graduated from Pasadena College (now Point Loma Nazarene University) in 1955. After graduation, Bruce served four churches as minister of Christian education at Los Angeles First, Seattle First, Upland First, and Nampa College Church of the Nazarene.

During these years (1957-1968) he also served as vice president of the Nazarene Directors of Christian Education Fellowship.

In 1968 Bruce came to Northwest Nazarene College as director of admissions. During his years at NNC, Bruce sent over 100,000 hand-written birthday or holiday cards and personal notes (most written between 9:00 p.m. and 1:00 a.m.) plus tens of thousands of letters and phone calls to prospective and current students, colleagues and pastors. He was more than a recruiter—he was everyone's friend. His personal attention to students did not cease with their enrollment. He was highly visible in chapel, the cafeteria, campus coffee shop, and at ball games. For many on campus, he also served as pastor, counselor and confidant. People would frequently walk through his always-open office door to find him in prayer with a student or colleague. For 15 years Bruce corresponded with every Nazarene missionary's child during his or her teen years. This personalized touch created a growth pattern that peaked in a record undergraduate enrollment of 1352 in 1981-82. It is not surprising that Bruce came to personify "Mr. NNC" for countless prospects, students, parents and constituents across nearly two-and-a-half decades. Bruce and his wife, Gina, now divide their time between family in California and Idaho and time in Arizona.

PROFESSIONAL ACHIEVEMENT

—Ken Wilde

Ken Wilde, recipient of NNU's 2004 Professional Achievement award, is a 1972 graduate with a degree in political science and history, who also spent his college days participating in track and basketball.

After graduation, Ken was a school teacher for many years in both public and private education, before becoming the senior pastor of Capitol Christian Center in Boise, Idaho, eighteen years ago. Among his other involvements, Ken has also served as chaplain of the Idaho State Senate.

One of Ken's passions, especially in the last several years, has been to see churches and believers of all denominations rally together in unified prayer for revival in our nation. That passion, and a clear obedience to God's leading, has resulted in the establishment of the National Prayer Center in Washington D.C., which Ken founded and where he serves as executive director. The National Prayer Center is an inter-denominational, non-profit organization dedicated to activating, mobilizing and inspiring Christians across America to become involved in the Biblical mandate to pray for our leaders and for revival in order to heal our land.

The prayer center is headquartered in Washington D.C. within walking distance of the United States Capitol building. The facility's primary function is to be a place of prayer for our nation and its leaders and has become a gathering place for Christians burdened for our land to pray and intercede for national healing and revival. The prayer center staff facilitates corporate prayer times with Congress members and other prayer leaders. The center is also opened to members of Congress and their staffs for times of prayer, devotion and encouragement.

Ken and his wife, Connie, have three children, Kristi, Rachele and Tracy. Tracy is a 2004 graduate of NNU.

Change Proposed to NNU Alumni Association Constitution Your Vote is Requested

Changes to the constitution of the NNU Alumni Association require a two-thirds majority vote of the constituency to be implemented, and your Alumni Association Board of Directors has proposed some changes.

The Alumni Board of Directors is aiming for the authority and flexibility to increase the size of the alumni board. Historically, representation on the Alumni Board of Directors has consisted of nine members: one each from the seven districts in the NNU educational region or zone as identified by the Church of the Nazarene (i.e. Alaska, Colorado, Intermountain, Northwest, Oregon-Pacific, Rocky Mountain and Washington-Pacific), as well as the presiding president and one additional director representing alumni outside the educational zone.

Over the years the NNU alumni population has changed so that the present board make-up no longer adequately represents alumni demographics. The actual proposed change to the constitution is written in such a way to allow the board of directors to have some flexibility in selection as the demographics continue to change. The board would also like to include a current student as an ex-officio representative.

You will find the complete constitution of the Alumni Association and the language of the proposed changes at this link, where you may also submit your approval or disapproval: www.nnu.edu/alumni.

If you do not have access to the World Wide Web and would like to see the proposed changes, a printed copy will be mailed to you upon request by calling 1-800-654-2411.

In order to comply with the sixty day voting period required for changes to the constitution, ballots will be accepted until August 30, 2004.

Yakima Pastor Helps Grow NNU Ministerial Scholarship Program

Many people have been involved in the inception of NNU's ministerial scholarship program. One of those instrumental people is Rev. Holland Lewis. As chair of the Ministerial Scholarship Task Force, Holland took it upon himself to make a difference in the lives of future students. This spring, he presented a check for over $40,000 from Yakima West Valley Church of the Nazarene. With the involvement of local churches and individual donations, NNU is more than half way towards the ministerial scholarship endowment goal of $1,200,000. We still need your help! Please encourage your local church or those interested individuals to contact Barry Swanson in the church relations office at 1-208-467-8530.

A Will for

by Gary Skaggs

Vice President for University Advancement

"I want to die without a will."

Have you really heard anyone say those words? I haven't either. Everyone agrees that it is a good idea to leave instructions for the use after our death of what God has helped us accumulate.

Actually, no one dies without a will. If we fail to do it ourselves, state governments have "written" a general will stipulating how estates will be dispersed. But the state doesn't know our dreams, priorities, commitments and the things we have come to value.

I'm sure you know the importance of a personalized will or other estate planning document. You agree that establishing a will or revising a will completed many years ago (when your children were young, before grandchildren or retirement, when your estate was much smaller) is a high priority. Unfortunately it often takes plans for travel or a catastrophic event, serious illness or death of someone close to us to get our attention and motivate us. When you do your estate planning, remember these important considerations:

Reflect Your Wishes

Appoint someone you trust, without bond, instead of a court-appointed executor. Provide for family members in ways that state statutes will not – establish a trust to benefit your spouse; eliminate estate taxes; disperse money to children or grandchildren in a prolonged manner. Identify charities important to you for special bequests or a tithe from your estate. (NNU can provide sample language.) Detail allocations reflecting your priorities and desires.

Legally Valid

Don't shortcut by using a stationary-store document or writing your wishes on a home computer as a do-it-yourself project. Why complete a will without being sure it is legally valid?

Up to Date

Life isn't static. Family situations change. Needs and desires are different from five years ago. Estate tax laws come and go. An outdated will could be as harmful as no will at all.

Amendable

Your will is not locked in concrete. You can make changes easily by adding a codicil or redrafting.

Safely Stored

Store the original document in a safe place (such as a bank safety deposit box) and let someone close to you know the location.

I wouldn't be doing my job if I didn't ask you to prayerfully consider Northwest Nazarene University as you designate a portion of your estate to charity. Estate gifts received this year have added to the student scholarship endowment, assisted in much-needed facility construction and helped with vital campus maintenance. Without these gifts, many important needs of Northwest Nazarene University would go unmet.

We can assist you in preparing or updating a will or living trust, answer questions, provide information, and if needed, direct you to an attorney in your area. Such planning will give you peace of mind, benefit your loved ones and perhaps benefit NNU as well. Together, we can make a difference for eternity.

NNU the right choice for PRIDGEN

By Craig Stensgaard, NNU Sports Information Director

Now that finals have ended and Crusader sophomore Danielle Pridgen has both her freshman year and everything she owns in her rearview mirror, her first comment when asked if she would do anything different was made with laughter. “Besides getting more sleep and bringing fewer things into my dorm room, there really isn’t anything I would do different. I love everything about this place!” Pridgen said.

While Danielle worked on moving out of the dorm for the summer, she took some time to reflect with me on the past year and how NNU has become an integral part of her life. “It was definitely an adjustment as I was away from home, trying to balance my classes, and at the same time playing basketball at a completely new level. Once I established a routine and got used to it all, everything fell into place and it has turned out great,” she said.

To say it “fell into place” is an understatement, as the 6-foot forward was named the Great Northwest Athletic Conference co-Freshman of the Year, averaging 13.2 points per game and an amazing 9.7 rebounds per contest, leading the entire conference. She also posted a conference-best 13 double-doubles in a 27 game season on a Crusader team that went 15-12 overall. “I was really surprised (with the award), just because I didn’t realize there was an award like that. I just played every game the best I could, and took what it gave me. I remember thinking, ‘Wow, I can’t believe that they picked me out of all the freshman in the league.’” In addition to starting on the basketball team, Pridgen also competed for the NNU track and field team.

“It was a good season, but it was hard to make the transition from basketball to track, because my heart is so much into basketball. The track coaches were great and I loved the team, but the strength I’ve gained working out for basketball has slowed me down on the track.”

Being slow on the track is a first for Danielle, since she is an 11-time individual 2A State track champion in Idaho and holds the state records in both the 400-meters (55.98) and 800-meters (2:13.91).

When asked what she was planning for the summer, the kinesiology education major told me that she is planning to work for Northwest Basketball Camps (a Christian basketball camp organization) for three or four weeks coaching basketball and also take a Water Safety Instruction course in Boise. “After the class, I plan on teaching swimming lessons at the YMCA in Boise,” she said and added a little tongue-in-cheek, “In my spare time, I will be working out for basketball and getting ready for next season.”

the art of jennifer harmes

Alumna Jennifer Harmes worked as a graphic designer for 13 years before leaving her career to devote herself full-time to painting and exhibiting her work. Originally from New Zealand, where she now lives, Jennifer concentrates on florals and explains that her love of painting flowers runs deep.

"Each flower has its own voice, its own attachment of memories and emotion. I love how flowers are totally spontaneous and fill a space with energy and life. There is so much to learn from their natural rhythms and from their generous, unselfconscious beauty. Flowers have the power to make us look at life anew," she says. Jennifer's work is represented in numerous private collections and can be found online at www.jenniferharmes.com.
